> ALABAMA POWER COMPANY BIRMINGHAM, ALABAMA

To the Customers of Alabama Power Company:

In the Chicago Journal of Commerce of October 1933, there appeared an editorial entitled "An Appeal to Common Sense", which we believe will be of interest to our customers. The author says in part:

"There is an outstanding instance of the danger of crippling the innocent bystander in the efforts of the various governments to avenge the public for the acts of certain promoters in the public utility field. There is also grave danger that, having avenged the public by various punitive measures, the public will pay higher rates for utility service in the end than at present . . .

"Now can this be so? In the year 1930, the utility companies spent $930,000,000 for construction. That money, which employed a small army of men and used the products of hundreds of factories, was borrowed from the public because the companies had a margin of earnings over expenses. That margin, itself representing one of the narrowest differences between cost and selling price of any of the public services today, also went to pay local taxes which helped to pay school teachers' salaries, policemen, and firemen, and so forth . . .

"But of graver consideration is what utility rates are likely to be after private management is thoroughly throttled and private capital is out of business. Under private management utility rates have been going down steadily since 1913, while under government control railroad rates have been increasing since 1913 . . .

"We hear much of social justice these days. Will it be social justice to the crippled children and dependent orphans in the many institutions which depend on the income from utility bonds, to take action which, endangers their livelihood? For illustration, how many know that there is danger that the Central Baptist Children's Home and the Northern Baptist Theological Seminary are in danger of closing because their income from utility bonds is endangered? And these are but two of many such."

To bring this closer home: Alabama Power Company has expended over One Hundred Million Dollars in Alabama for new construction and other capital purposes during the past ten years; during this period it has paid in taxes to state, county and local governments over $13,000,-000, and in dividends to its 16,000 Preferred stockholders over $17,500,000; some 12,000 of such stockholders now living in the State of Alabama.
